B

I've always believed sports, but I simply didn't get along. I just hated sports. In school, I was known to be often secretly "sick" on sports day. My mom was my partner, writing notes (假条) about my "bad foot" to get me out of PE.

Then came the invitation. A close friend asked me to his birthday football game. "Absolutely not," a voice shouted from the bottom of my heart. But it was his birthday. So, with a heavy heart, I went—fully planning to stand safely at the side and just watch.

But something unexpected happened the moment I stepped onto the grass. I found myself following the ball. I even kicked it once, passing to a teammate, and we both started laughing. When someone scored, I cheered without thinking. I was... having fun.

When my mother heard about it, she was surprised. "Football? Really?" she asked, remembering all her old notes. "In fact, it was pretty good," I said.

Now, every Sunday finds me in the football field with friends. Why do I keep going back? It's more than exercise or friendship. It's the simple joy of doing something just because it's fun.

The best part? My mom, who used to be my note-writer, saw me putting on my football shoes one day and said, "Well, if you can try something new, maybe I can too." Soon after, she joined a local walking group!

Looking back, I never imagined kicking a ball could change something. But it did. It taught me that joy often waits on the other side of "I can't". Why not give something you hate a chance, too?

19. Why did the writer avoid PE?

- A. He was busy with homework.                      B. He had a real foot problem.
C. He wanted to meet his friends.                      D. He disliked doing sports.

20. How did the writer feel after the birthday football game?

- A. He felt bored.      B. He found it fun.      C. He felt relaxed.      D. He found it tiring.

21. Which is the right order of the following events?

- a. The writer started playing football with friends every Sunday.
b. The writer's mother joined a walking group.
c. The writer made excuses to avoid PE lessons at school.
d. The writer played in a friend's birthday football game and had fun.

- A. c-d-a-b                      B. d-c-a-b                      C. c-d-b-a                      D. d-a-c-b

22. What is "the best part" according to the passage?

- A. He made some good friends.                      B. He became a good football player.
C. His mom tried something new.                      D. His mom started to play football.

C

Have you ever received a polite smile from a worker at a highway toll booth(收费站)? In fact, similar scenes have played out in many places. Recently, a well-known chain store has introduced a "10-4 program" for its workers.

The program's rule is clear and detailed. Workers must smile politely and wave warmly from ten feet away. When a customer comes within four feet, they must personally greet them. The workers have received a smile guidebook that says, "Lift the corners of your mouth, part your lips to show your teeth, and hold this until the customer smiles back." Can kindness that comes from strict instructions ever be truly warm and sincere?

Besides, treating every customer the same way can do more harm than good. People are different. Some welcome a friendly chat, while others simply wish to be left alone to shop or eat in birdwatching has become very popular in China, especially among young people, which helps draw people's attention to protecting swifts.

(Several students are talking with Li Ming from the "Student Internet Safety Helper" group.)

Lily: Li Ming, your group's slogan is "WCK". What does it stand for?

Li Ming: WCK stands for our three key online rules: Wise, Careful, and Kind. "Wise" is all about thinking before you share. "Careful" serves as a reminder to watch out for online risks and strange messages. 31

Lily: Yeah, truly creative. What are the most common problems online for teens?

Li Ming: Many worry about online bullying, wrong information, and too much screen time.

Sam: What do you usually do to help?

Li Ming: 32 For example, we tell friends to be kind and report bullying. We also teach how to check if the information is true.

Sam: Has it been easy to get everyone to listen?

Li Ming: Not always. Some people think safety education is unnecessary and boring, or too much trouble. 33 We want everyone to see that learning to be safe can be interesting.

John: Do you have any other advice?

Li Ming: Sure. Being safe online sounds difficult. 34 Just ask for help if you see something bad. The most important thing is to be safe and kind online.

- A. We share simple but useful tips.
B. But starting with small steps helps.
C. This is because we call our slogan WCK.
D. "Kind" tells us to treat others nicely online.
E. So, we use fun videos and stories to show what can happen.

35. Are WCK rules useful? How do you keep safe online? (不超过 15 词)

Smart Use of Pocket Money

Recently, our school carried out a survey among 200 students about how they spend their pocket money. Here are the results. According to the results, 35% of the students spend their money on hobbies, which accounts for the largest proportion. It is followed by school things at 30%, while 25% is spent on food and drinks. In addition, 10% of the money is spent on other things. It is clearly shown that students tend to spend more on personal interests. As for me, I usually spend my pocket money on books and school supplies so that I can improve myself. I believe that money should be used wisely. And we should avoid wasting money on unnecessary things, which not only saves money but also helps us develop good habits. In conclusion, the more wisely we use our pocket money, the better our life will be.
